Abstract

Arms and weapons have always been a necessity for the safety, security for an individual and state as a whole from the time when civilization began to flourish to the time kingdoms reached their golden age. Arms and army to the state were as important as the treasury to the king. So the Research work on the article help us to analyse and understand the importance of these arms and weapons and how they played important role in military, administration, and economy of Marwar state of Rajputana i.e. modern day jodhpur of Rajasthan.

Keywords: Arms, weapons, Marwar, Swords, castes, Silehkhana dafter.

Having knowledge of arms and weapons is as important as understanding the gradual growth and development of any civilization in relation to the time in which it flourished. India and its different princely states in medieval era like Rajputana, Gujarat, utter Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Bengal, and many states of South India are no exception to it. All these States have their own mechanism of defence and offence which they maintained on the basis of the kind of weapons they had with themselves.

CONCLUSION:

To conclude, we can say that weapons were of great significance in ancient and medieval times in Marwar state of Rajputana and still the significance of arms and weapons is immense in modern days as any state or central government give importance and allocate a big amount of money for defence purpose to manufacture and develop and maintain the armoury for police or for defence forces. Although Bharat believes and have a principle of universal brotherhood and peace still arms play pivotal role in political sphere of a state or country.
